Characteristics of skin cancers:

- BCCs
- SCC and KAs
- Melanomas
- Zebras and unicorns
- Bazillions of benign thingies that worry the patients WAY more than the horrible dysplastic- looking naevus on their neck.
- I don't want to teach you how to suck eggs here....
- Think about how you do a skin check.... I use loupes and a dermatoscope BUT : A mark one eyeball and a switched on brain and a $2 magnifying glass will do the trick most of the time. Your phone camera is useful- so is the patient's.

Oh, it's just a barnacle,
doc!

7

What does this process
represent?

“Not
real
surgery”

What
should
you
watch
out for here?

Some 5-FU in a tube is mighty useful
sometimes-
this is Paul.
He's a farmer.
And a ranga.

19

Don't be fooled by the innocent appearance and benign looks.... Or the offer to share the warthog

20

Definitely as grotty as the pup in the last slide....

How big an excision?

A shave biopsy
might get you
out of trouble
here- especially
if these are two of hundreds.
Photos are useful as are charts.

Stay
alert for
warning
bells
and red
flags.
And
sheeps

You can achieve a pleasing AND functional cosmetic result with a bit of care. This is a week post op.

- It hasn't rained for weeks/months
- It hasn't stopped raining for weeks/months
- It's frosty and the wheat isn't sprouting
- It hasn't frosted yet this year, so it'll all come in the spring when the wheat is flowering
- We've got rust [it's been raining]
- It's rained and the protein's down
- It hasn't rained and the yields are down
- We didn't put in canola this year and the price is up
- We put in canola this year and the price is down
- It's too cold for the wheat to dry off properly
- It's too wet to harvest
- It's too dry and hot and there's a harvest ban
- There's no money in fat lambs
- There's no money in wool
- We should have kept the sheep
- I can't possibly have my surgery, we're harvesting/seeding/mulesing/crutching/shearing.
